Some scanned pages are out of printed order; answers follow the question labels. Question 1(ix) has a future option that is less precise than “in two weeks”; the distinction is explained.

Section A — Objective questions

1(i). Which official-form item asks whether you are married?

Step 1: Read the question's key expression and compare the options.

Step 2: Marital status describes marriage status; surname and other names identify a person.

Final Answer: D — Marital status.

1(ii). What is a synonym of furious?

Step 1: Read the question's key expression and compare the options.

Step 2: Furious means extremely angry, rather than sad, happy or excited.

Final Answer: B — Angry.

1(iii). In “at the school gate”, what does at indicate?

Step 1: Read the question's key expression and compare the options.

Step 2: The school gate is the specified meeting location.

Final Answer: A — A certain place.

1(iv). “I didn't find anybody in the classroom” means what?

Step 1: Read the question's key expression and compare the options.

Step 2: Not anybody is equivalent to nobody.

Final Answer: D — Nobody was there.

1(v). What question should a father ask about a loud noise happening now?

Step 1: Read the question's key expression and compare the options.

Step 2: Is happening uses present continuous for an event occurring at the moment.

Final Answer: C — What is happening outside?

1(vi). Which set describes repeated actions?

Step 1: Read the question's key expression and compare the options.

Step 2: All three indicate frequency; the other sets mix unrelated past or future time expressions.

Final Answer: C — Daily, usually, always.

1(vii). Which question does not directly ask a mango's price?

Step 1: Read the question's key expression and compare the options.

Step 2: How do asks about manner. How much and cost directly ask about price.

Final Answer: A — How do you sell mangoes?

1(viii). Which sentence expresses a future habit?

Step 1: Read the question's key expression and compare the options.

Step 2: From next Monday indicates a routine beginning then; the other choices describe one event or completion.

Final Answer: B — I will be eating lunch at 1:00 p.m. from next Monday.

1(ix). Halima and Sankole are going to marry in two weeks. What does this mean?

Step 1: Read the question's key expression and compare the options.

Step 2: Going to marry points forward. A, B and C describe past events.

Final Answer: D — The ceremony will take place within two weeks, is the intended future option.

Study Tip: "In two weeks" means about two weeks from now; "within two weeks" means no later than two weeks from now. D is the only future option but is not an exact paraphrase.

1(x). Which newspaper statement presents factual information?

Step 1: Read the question's key expression and compare the options.

Step 2: This is a checkable numerical claim. I think, likely and might identify opinion or uncertainty.

Final Answer: B — 75% of Form II students passed their National Assessment last year.

Section C — Reading programme

10. Explain three good practices from each of two prescribed readers that people should imitate.

Step 1: Plan exactly three good practices per reader and choose character actions to support them.

Step 2: Use Hawa's professional work, removal of the drunken passenger and help for the injured boy; use Mauja's farm work, mat weaving and advice. Explain why each practice should be imitated.

Step 3: Explain why each practice matters in real life. Finish with a conclusion bringing the six points together.

Final Answer: Model response:

Literature offers examples of conduct that improves daily life. In Hawa the Bus Driver and Mabala the Farmer, R. S. Mabala presents practices worth imitating through Hawa and Mauja.

First, Hawa shows dedication by working as a bus driver and transporting passengers. Her example encourages people to develop useful skills and take their duties seriously. Second, she acts courageously when a drunken man causes trouble on her bus: she removes him to protect the passengers. People should imitate her willingness to oppose behaviour that endangers others. Third, when a boy is knocked down by a vehicle, Hawa takes him to hospital. Helping an injured person shows compassion expressed through immediate action. Communities benefit when people respond to others' needs instead of simply watching.

Mauja demonstrates hard work by digging, planting and weeding on the farm. Her effort helps support the family, showing why people should contribute rather than expect others to do everything. She also weaves mats to earn income. This resourcefulness is worth imitating because using practical skills can improve a household's livelihood. Finally, she advises Mabala and other villagers. Sharing useful knowledge helps people solve problems, while her guidance encourages her husband to become more responsible. We should therefore offer constructive advice and be willing to learn from it. The readers encourage dedication, protective courage, compassion, hard work, resourcefulness and helpful guidance. Following these practices can strengthen cooperation and reduce avoidable hardship in our own communities.

Study Tip: This independently written model may be adapted to other prescribed readers when the evidence is accurate.

Section Summary: Connect a positive practice to a character's action, then explain why the community would benefit from imitating it.
