All four Section C options are included for study, although candidates were instructed to answer three. The original poem has exactly two stanzas of four lines each. Responses are independent model solutions, not an official marking scheme.

Section A — Objective questions

1(i). Change the job-loss third conditional to a possible condition.

Step 1: Identify the language feature or communicative purpose in the question.

Step 2: A possible future condition uses if + present simple, then will + base verb.

Final Answer: C — If I lose my job, I will go abroad.

1(ii). Why add “wasn’t she?” to “She was my friend”?

Step 1: Identify the language feature or communicative purpose in the question.

Step 2: The tag invites confirmation of a statement the speaker already puts forward.

Final Answer: A — To confirm information.

1(iii). Give the past-perfect form of “No sooner did we leave ... than it began to rain.”

Step 1: Identify the language feature or communicative purpose in the question.

Step 2: Initial no sooner requires auxiliary-subject inversion; use had left for the earlier action and began for the later event.

Final Answer: E — No sooner had we left the house than it began to rain.

1(iv). Correct the verbs used for a man and a boat in a river.

Step 1: Identify the language feature or communicative purpose in the question.

Step 2: Drown refers to a person dying through submersion; sink describes the boat going below the surface. “The man drowned” is also natural wording.

Final Answer: B — The man was drowned but the boat sank in the same river.

1(v). What is the name for a proposition discussed in a debate?

Step 1: Identify the language feature or communicative purpose in the question.

Step 2: A motion is the proposition supported or opposed by debaters.

Final Answer: C — Motion.

1(vi). When is “Dear Sir/Madam” appropriate in an application?

Step 1: Identify the language feature or communicative purpose in the question.

Step 2: Use a general formal salutation if the addressee is not personally identified.

Final Answer: B — When you do not know the recipient’s name.

1(vii). What kind of writing creates a fictional story using literary skills?

Step 1: Identify the language feature or communicative purpose in the question.

Step 2: Creative writing invents and shapes imaginative content.

Final Answer: C — Creative writing.

1(viii). “I think education has no significance” is based on what?

Step 1: Identify the language feature or communicative purpose in the question.

Step 2: I think introduces a judgement rather than a demonstrated fact.

Final Answer: D — Opinion.

1(ix). Choose the conventional order of the listed CV sections.

Step 1: Identify the language feature or communicative purpose in the question.

Step 2: Begin with identity, then relevant preparation and experience, followed by optional interests and references.

Final Answer: E — Personal details, educational background, work experience, hobbies, referees.

1(x). What is an unprepared, improvised speech called?

Step 1: Identify the language feature or communicative purpose in the question.

Step 2: Impromptu means delivered without advance preparation.

Final Answer: B — Impromptu speech.

2(i). Match the main-clause tense: I declare this exhibition open.

Step 1: Identify the auxiliary and main verb in the principal clause.

Step 2: Declare is a base present-tense verb with I.

Final Answer: G — Simple Present.

2(ii). Match the main-clause tense: Juma has not been home since he was a boy.

Step 1: Identify the auxiliary and main verb in the principal clause.

Step 2: Has + been is present perfect; since links the earlier point to the present.

Final Answer: E — Present Perfect.

2(iii). Match the main-clause tense: Our new coach is speaking to my brother.

Step 1: Identify the auxiliary and main verb in the principal clause.

Step 2: Is + speaking shows an ongoing present action.

Final Answer: C — Present Progressive.

2(iv). Match the main-clause tense: I never met my grandparents.

Step 1: Identify the auxiliary and main verb in the principal clause.

Step 2: Met is the irregular past form of meet.

Final Answer: F — Simple Past.

2(v). Match the main-clause tense: She was wondering whether you could give her a lift.

Step 1: Identify the auxiliary and main verb in the principal clause.

Step 2: Was + wondering is past progressive.

Final Answer: B — Past Progressive.

Section Summary: Conditional type I uses present simple plus will. Question tags can request confirmation; inverted no sooner clauses require careful auxiliary order.

Section B — Language use

3(i). Introduce yourself when reserving a Dar es Salaam-Dodoma bus seat by telephone.

Step 1: Use a clear, courteous telephone request.

Step 2: Greet politely, give a name and check that you have the correct office.

Final Answer: Good morning. My name is Amina Juma. Am I speaking to the reservations office?

3(ii). State the reservation request.

Step 1: Use a clear, courteous telephone request.

Step 2: Specify number of seats, route and intended travel day. Tomorrow is a model date that can be replaced.

Final Answer: I would like to reserve one seat on your bus from Dar es Salaam to Dodoma tomorrow, please.

3(iii). Ask for the fare.

Step 1: Use a clear, courteous telephone request.

Step 2: Ask directly for the cost without assuming a price.

Final Answer: How much is the fare for one passenger from Dar es Salaam to Dodoma, please?

3(iv). Ask when to report.

Step 1: Use a clear, courteous telephone request.

Step 2: Distinguish reporting time from departure time so that the traveller arrives early enough.

Final Answer: At what time should I report to the terminal before departure?

4(i). Add an affix to refine to name a place of activity.

Step 1: Choose an affix carrying the required meaning.

Step 2: Attach -ry to refine, dropping the final e: refine → refinery.

Final Answer: refinery

4(ii). Add an affix to fire to mean wrongly or astray.

Step 1: Choose an affix carrying the required meaning.

Step 2: Prefix mis- indicates error or failure.

Final Answer: misfire

4(iii). Change mud to mean covered with mud.

Step 1: Choose an affix carrying the required meaning.

Step 2: Add suffix -y, doubling final d.

Final Answer: muddy

4(iv). Add an affix to check to mean in opposition to or against.

Step 1: Choose an affix carrying the required meaning.

Step 2: Prefix counter- expresses opposition or a counteracting check.

Final Answer: countercheck

5(i). Show an action repeatedly performed in the past.

Step 1: Construct a complete sentence with tense and timing matching the instruction.

Step 2: Used to + base verb and every day clearly express a former habit. "I had been walking to school daily before we moved" is a valid past-perfect-progressive alternative.

Final Answer: When I was younger, I used to walk to school every day.

5(ii). Show two actions in progress at the moment of speaking.

Step 1: Construct a complete sentence with tense and timing matching the instruction.

Step 2: Use present continuous in both clauses to express simultaneous current actions.

Final Answer: Asha is reading while Baraka is writing.

5(iii). Show an action that was in progress in the past.

Step 1: Construct a complete sentence with tense and timing matching the instruction.

Step 2: Use was + -ing with a specified past time.

Final Answer: At eight o'clock last night, I was revising English.

5(iv). Show two actions progressing simultaneously in the past.

Step 1: Construct a complete sentence with tense and timing matching the instruction.

Step 2: Use past continuous in both clauses and while to connect simultaneous events.

Final Answer: I was cooking while my sister was setting the table.

6(i). Rewrite using the possessive case: That is a foot length.

Step 1: Decide whether the possessor is singular or plural before placing the apostrophe.

Step 2: The singular foot takes apostrophe + s.

Final Answer: That is a foot's length.

6(ii). Rewrite using the possessive case: We saw the butcher shop.

Step 1: Decide whether the possessor is singular or plural before placing the apostrophe.

Step 2: The shop belongs to or is run by a singular butcher.

Final Answer: We saw the butcher's shop.

6(iii). Rewrite using the possessive case: A student at Tegeta Girls Secondary School.

Step 1: Decide whether the possessor is singular or plural before placing the apostrophe.

Step 2: Girls is plural and ends in s, so add an apostrophe after s. The original is a phrase; "She is a student ..." would make it a full sentence.

Final Answer: A student at Tegeta Girls' Secondary School.

6(iv). Rewrite using the possessive case: She works at Ladies beauty salon.

Step 1: Decide whether the possessor is singular or plural before placing the apostrophe.

Step 2: Plural ladies ends in s, so the possessive apostrophe follows s.

Final Answer: She works at the ladies' beauty salon.

6(v). Rewrite using the possessive case: Please do it, for goodness sake!

Step 1: Decide whether the possessor is singular or plural before placing the apostrophe.

Step 2: The conventional expression uses goodness' sake.

Final Answer: Please do it, for goodness' sake!

6(vi). Rewrite using the possessive case: I hate a duty call.

Step 1: Decide whether the possessor is singular or plural before placing the apostrophe.

Step 2: Singular duty takes 's; the noun phrase refers to the call of duty.

Final Answer: I hate duty's call.

6(vii). Rewrite using the possessive case: He was the president at teachers trade union.

Step 1: Decide whether the possessor is singular or plural before placing the apostrophe.

Step 2: Plural teachers takes a final apostrophe; of naturally links president with the union.

Final Answer: He was the president of the teachers' trade union.

6(viii). Rewrite using the possessive case: It is a day match.

Step 1: Decide whether the possessor is singular or plural before placing the apostrophe.

Step 2: For the possessive exercise, singular day takes 's.

Final Answer: It is a day's match.

Study Tip: "A day match" is already valid as a noun modifier meaning a match played during the day. "A day's match" follows the requested possessive form but can change that nuance.

7(i). Report the Ali-Janet dialogue in one paragraph as Janet.

Step 1: Take Janet's viewpoint: Janet becomes I or me; Ali remains he.

Step 2: Use reporting verbs and backshift am going to was going. Report the command with told him that he had to hurry up.

Final Answer: Ali greeted me and asked where I was going. I told him that I was going to the playground to watch a football match. Laughing, he said that he was going to the bus stop to meet his brother, who was coming from Pemba. I told him that he had to hurry up.

7(ii). Report the same dialogue in one paragraph as Ali.

Step 1: Take Ali's viewpoint: Ali becomes I, me and my; Janet becomes she or her.

Step 2: Turn the question into where she was going, without question inversion. Report each statement with the appropriate person and past tense.

Final Answer: I greeted Janet and asked where she was going. She told me that she was going to the playground to watch a football match. Laughing, I told her that I was going to the bus stop to meet my brother, who was coming from Pemba. She told me that I had to hurry up.

8(i). Show a relationship between people using a preposition.

Step 1: Choose a preposition carrying the requested relation and build a grammatical sentence.

Step 2: Between links the two people in the relationship.

Final Answer: There is a strong friendship between Asha and Neema.

8(ii). Use a preposition meaning higher than.

Step 1: Choose a preposition carrying the requested relation and build a grammatical sentence.

Step 2: Above indicates a higher position.

Final Answer: The picture hangs above the doorway.

8(iii). Use a preposition to express speed.

Step 1: Choose a preposition carrying the requested relation and build a grammatical sentence.

Step 2: At introduces the stated speed.

Final Answer: The bus travelled at sixty kilometres per hour.

8(iv). Use a preposition to signify possession.

Step 1: Choose a preposition carrying the requested relation and build a grammatical sentence.

Step 2: Of links the roof to the house to which it belongs.

Final Answer: The roof of the house needs repair.

Section Summary: Reporting changes viewpoint as well as tense. For possessives, singular nouns generally take 's and regular s-plurals take a final apostrophe.

Section C — Composition and literature

9 — Poem. Compose two stanzas of four verses each containing the seven requested literary features.

Step 1: Plan two blocks with four lines each. Include a comparison without like, a comparison with like, a human action assigned to dawn and an exaggeration.

Step 2: Repeat the last line as a refrain. Use the speaker I as the persona and include the Kiswahili word Elimu deliberately as language mixing.

Final Answer: A Lamp for Tomorrow

My hope is a lamp in the rain,
The dawn whispers, “Rise and try”;
I run like the wind through pain,
Elimu is light: let hope fly.

I have climbed a million stairs,
Still I lift my eyes to the sky;
My courage answers all my cares,
Elimu is light: let hope fly.

Study Tip: This is an original model poem. “Barbarism” is the examination’s traditional literary term for the deliberate use of a word from another language.

9(i). Identify the metaphor in the model poem.

Step 1: Refer to the original model poem immediately above.

Step 2: It makes the comparison without like or as.

Final Answer: “My hope is a lamp”: hope is directly compared with a guiding light.

9(ii). Identify personification.

Step 1: Refer to the original model poem immediately above.

Step 2: Whispering is attributed to a nonhuman thing.

Final Answer: “The dawn whispers”: dawn is given the human ability to speak softly.

9(iii). Identify the simile.

Step 1: Refer to the original model poem immediately above.

Step 2: The word like explicitly marks the comparison.

Final Answer: “I run like the wind”: the speaker’s movement is compared with wind.

9(iv). Identify hyperbole.

Step 1: Refer to the original model poem immediately above.

Step 2: The vast number emphasises hardship rather than supplying a literal count.

Final Answer: “I have climbed a million stairs”: a deliberately exaggerated account of effort.

9(v). Identify the persona.

Step 1: Refer to the original model poem immediately above.

Step 2: The repeated I expresses personal determination; the persona need not be the poet.

Final Answer: A hopeful learner or young person speaking in the first person.

9(vi). Identify the refrain.

Step 1: Refer to the original model poem immediately above.

Step 2: The complete line recurs at the end of both stanzas.

Final Answer: “Elimu is light: let hope fly.”

9(vii). Identify barbarism or language mixing.

Step 1: Refer to the original model poem immediately above.

Step 2: The word from another language reinforces the poem’s educational message.

Final Answer: Elimu, a Kiswahili word meaning education, appears in an English poem.

10. Use two prescribed poems to explain how three sound devices in each communicate messages.

Step 1: Choose two poems from the prescribed collections, then identify three sound devices for each with short, accurate evidence.

Step 2: For A Freedom Song use refrain, /s/ alliteration and pay/day rhyme. For Building the Nation use /d/ alliteration, repetition and short-/ɪ/ assonance.

Step 3: Explain what each pattern emphasises; do not merely list devices or replace sound analysis with general themes.

Final Answer: Model response:

Sound patterns can emphasise a poem's ideas and make its criticism memorable. A Freedom Song by Marjorie Oludhe Macgoye and Building the Nation by Henry Barlow show this in different ways.

In A Freedom Song, the repeated refrain "Atieno yo" continually returns attention to the child. Its recurrence makes her suffering difficult to overlook and challenges the uncle's excuses. Alliteration in "Sewing every sunny day" repeats the initial /s/ sound. The smooth phrase describes adult comfort beside the girl's labour, sharpening the contrast between their lives. Rhyme between "pay" and "day" links the denial of wages with the routine that benefits other people. This musical connection helps expose exploitation concealed as family care.

In Building the Nation, alliteration in "delicate diplomatic duties" gives the official's excuse a polished sound. The grand language contrasts with the meal he has enjoyed, revealing how respectable speech can disguise privilege. Repetition of the nation-building phrase questions who really contributes and who receives the benefits. By returning to that claim, the poem invites readers to compare words with conduct. Assonance in "building" and "slimming" repeats the short /ɪ/ vowel. The first word suggests collective progress, whereas the driver's joking reference to slimming conceals hunger; their shared sound makes the unequal experiences easier to compare.

Both poets therefore use sound as part of meaning. Refrain, rhyme, alliteration, repetition and assonance make their criticism memorable and encourage readers to reject exploitation and dishonest public service.

Study Tip: This is one model interpretation. Repeated vowel sounds are assonance; repeated initial consonants are alliteration. Neither poem needs a fixed rhyme scheme for individual sound patterns to operate.

11. Show how life's challenges cause disappointment, using three points from each of two plays.

Step 1: Introduce the two plays and connect three distinct challenges in each with a particular frustrated expectation.

Step 2: For Three Suitors use restricted marital choice, failed financial expectations and reliance on Sangatiti. For This Time Tomorrow use poverty, threatened housing and unsuccessful resistance.

Step 3: Explain the link from challenge to disappointment rather than simply retelling the plots.

Final Answer: Model response:

Disappointment arises when hopes meet obstacles. Three Suitors: One Husband by Guillaume Oyono Mbia and This Time Tomorrow by Ngugi wa Thiong'o show how social pressures frustrate people's plans.

In Three Suitors: One Husband, Juliette's wish to choose her partner meets her family's interest in bride wealth. This disappoints her because marriage is treated as a financial arrangement rather than her personal decision. The competing suitors also face disappointment when their payments do not secure the marriage they expect. The competition exposes the danger of treating consent as something money can purchase. A third challenge comes when the missing bride-wealth money creates accusations and dependence on Sangatiti's supposed powers. His failure to solve the problem leaves the family without the certainty they wanted. The episode challenges the expectation that superstition can replace evidence and honest problem-solving.

In This Time Tomorrow, poverty leaves Njango with a fragile livelihood and little security. Her hard work does not guarantee a stable future, so the gap between effort and opportunity becomes a source of frustration. The threatened demolition of the settlement then destroys the residents' hope of remaining in their homes. Njango's uncertainty about where she will be the next day captures this disappointment directly. Finally, the Stranger's attempt to organise resistance does not bring the protection people seek. The power used against the residents shows why hope based on collective protest can be frustrated when authorities refuse to address their needs.

The plays connect disappointment to greed, insecurity and unequal power. They suggest that lasting improvement requires respect for consent, reliable knowledge and fair treatment of vulnerable people.

12. Using three points from each of two novels, defend the view that ignorance can obstruct development.

Step 1: Choose the two novels and define ignorance as lack or rejection of relevant understanding, rather than equating it only with inability to read.

Step 2: Link each example to a concrete consequence for health, opportunity or dignity. Distinguish the novel's beliefs about illness from scientifically reliable explanations.

Step 3: Conclude by showing how informed decisions and respect for rights respond to the six points.

Final Answer: Model response:

Ignorance obstructs development when people misunderstand risks, reject useful knowledge or fail to recognise others' rights. Passed Like a Shadow by B. M. Mapalala and Unanswered Cries by Osman Conteh illustrate these problems.

In Passed Like a Shadow, Amoti interprets Adyeri's illness through an accusation of witchcraft involving Birungi. This misunderstanding shifts attention away from informed responses to disease and damages relationships. The novel also connects failure to understand sexual-health risks with the choices made by Adyeri and Atwoki. Personal success cannot protect someone who ignores risks; illness then harms the family's security and productive future. A third point is the failure to appreciate how knowledge and responsible choices work together. Atwoki's opportunities are undermined when harmful influence is valued above sound advice. The novel shows that development needs more than talent or income: people must use reliable information when making decisions.

In Unanswered Cries, Makalay treats female circumcision as essential to a girl's proper place in society. Her refusal to question that assumption threatens Olabisi's wellbeing and narrows the girl's future. Ignorance of health dangers is also exposed through the account of Dr. Asiatu's daughter, whose infection follows cutting with unsterilised instruments. The loss illustrates the cost of allowing an unsafe practice to continue unquestioned. Finally, the belief that adults may impose the practice without respecting a girl's choice reflects ignorance of her dignity and autonomy. Olabisi's resistance and Ade's support challenge this belief, showing that a community cannot develop fairly while silencing girls.

The novels therefore link ignorance with preventable harm, wasted opportunities and unjust treatment. Education must combine practical knowledge with critical thought and respect for people's rights if it is to promote development.

Study Tip: This is literary analysis of the novels' events. Avoid claiming that illness itself proves personal fault; the argument concerns misinformation, harmful practices and pressures portrayed by the authors.

Section Summary: Follow the requested form precisely. Literary essays need the required texts, distinct points, accurate evidence and explanation answering the actual claim.
