Source paper: English-F4-2023.pdf

This study key answers all Section C choices. The paper contains faulty wording in Questions 1(ii), 1(vi), 2(vi), 4(i), 4(vi) and 6(v); the relevant answers explain the limitations.

Section A — Objective questions

1(i). Replace popular in a village popular for growing coffee.

Step 1: Compare the wording and grammatical function of the alternatives.

Step 2: Famous means widely known for something.

Final Answer: D — Famous.

1(ii). Name an account of your own life.

Step 1: Compare the wording and grammatical function of the alternatives.

Step 2: Auto- means self and biography means a life account. Autography means writing in one's own hand, so the option contains an error.

Final Answer: C is the intended option, but the correct word is autobiography, not the printed autography.

1(iii). Name the description of someone as tall, black, fat, bearded and muscular.

Step 1: Compare the wording and grammatical function of the alternatives.

Step 2: Portrayal is a description or representation of a person. The listed features contribute to that portrayal.

Final Answer: B — Portrayal.

1(iv). Identify home in “the birds home their way”.

Step 1: Compare the wording and grammatical function of the alternatives.

Step 2: Home functions as a verb indicating movement towards a destination, rather than as the noun for a dwelling.

Final Answer: C — An action.

1(v). Give the intended long form of RE in an application-letter heading.

Step 1: Compare the wording and grammatical function of the alternatives.

Step 2: Use the letters in this exam, where Refer is D. Re: introduces the subject and is not properly an acronym that expands to Reference.

Final Answer: D — Refer, as intended by this paper. In standard correspondence Re: means regarding or in the matter of.

1(vi). Report “The teacher said, I can see Ali now.”

Step 1: Compare the wording and grammatical function of the alternatives.

Step 2: Keep said, change I to he and can to could. Normally now becomes then when the time viewpoint moves into the past.

Final Answer: Standard answer: The teacher said that he could see Ali then. None of the printed options gives this exact form; B is possible only if now still refers to the reporting moment.

1(vii). Identify cotton statements marked as opinions.

Step 1: Compare the wording and grammatical function of the alternatives.

Step 2: Believed, assumed and thought mark a view rather than asserting an established fact. This classifies the wording, not the truth of the cotton claim.

Final Answer: E — 2, 4 and 5.

1(viii). Introduce a second or third debate point.

Step 1: Compare the wording and grammatical function of the alternatives.

Step 2: Both link an additional argument to the preceding point.

Final Answer: A — Furthermore or Moreover.

1(ix). Restate “Seeing the door open, the stranger entered the house.”

Step 1: Compare the wording and grammatical function of the alternatives.

Step 2: The participle seeing has the stranger as its subject and introduces the circumstance of entry.

Final Answer: C — When he saw the door open, the stranger entered the house.

1(x). Identify the summary-writing sequence.

Step 1: Compare the wording and grammatical function of the alternatives.

Step 2: Understand and select essential information before drafting; revise the draft into a concise final summary.

Final Answer: C — Listen carefully, identify main ideas, make notes, write a first draft, then write the summary.

2(i). Match the service description: Groceries and other goods sold in a small area.

Step 1: Identify the kind of products or shopping arrangement.

Step 2: A small retail shop fits the description.

Final Answer: H — Shop.

2(ii). Match the service description: Goods sold in a large enclosed shopping area.

Step 1: Identify the kind of products or shopping arrangement.

Step 2: A mall contains shops in a larger complex.

Final Answer: D — Shopping mall.

2(iii). Match the service description: A wide variety of items bought by self-service.

Step 1: Identify the kind of products or shopping arrangement.

Step 2: Self-service is characteristic of a supermarket.

Final Answer: E — Supermarket.

2(iv). Match the service description: Milk, cheese and butter for sale.

Step 1: Identify the kind of products or shopping arrangement.

Step 2: These are dairy products.

Final Answer: G — Dairy.

2(v). Match the service description: Seeds and fertilisers for sale.

Step 1: Identify the kind of products or shopping arrangement.

Step 2: An agricultural-input shop supplies these goods.

Final Answer: C — Agrovet.

2(vi). Match the service description: Food for chickens, ducks and geese for sale.

Step 1: Identify the kind of products or shopping arrangement.

Step 2: The goods are poultry feed; strictly, a service point would be a poultry-feed shop, rather than the product name itself.

Final Answer: A — Poultry feed, the intended listed choice.

Section Summary: Check the option lettering against this exact paper. Autobiography is misspelled in one option, and the reported-speech item lacks the standard backshifted answer.

Section B — Language use

3(a)(i). Why did people attend the meeting?

Step 1: Find the relevant statement in the election passage.

Step 2: The meeting introduces contestants for the local election.

Final Answer: D — To listen to the candidates for councillor.

3(a)(ii). Why did they clap enthusiastically for Sikujua?

Step 1: Find the relevant statement in the election passage.

Step 2: The passage states this reason directly.

Final Answer: A — They liked her so much.

3(a)(iii). How many candidates contested?

Step 1: Find the relevant statement in the election passage.

Step 2: Count Sikujua Juma, Siamini Juma and Kauni Widambe.

Final Answer: C — Three.

3(a)(iv). What was Kauni's main proposal?

Step 1: Find the relevant statement in the election passage.

Step 2: She argues that the older generation has had its chance and young people should govern.

Final Answer: A — Youths should hold the position.

3(b)(i). Why listen to candidates despite heavy rain?

Step 1: Read the relevant event or expression in context.

Step 2: Connect the opening criticism of the former councillor with the purpose of choosing a replacement.

Final Answer: They wanted a better councillor who would develop the village after the previous councillor had disappointed them.

3(b)(ii). What caused the trouble?

Step 1: Read the relevant event or expression in context.

Step 2: Distinguish the supporters' disruption from the violence that followed the guards' response.

Final Answer: Kauni's supporters rushed towards the stage; security guards beat them with sticks, and the confrontation escalated.

3(b)(iii). How did the youths react to the blows?

Step 1: Read the relevant event or expression in context.

Step 2: Use the passage's description of the counterattack.

Final Answer: They fought back by throwing stones at the security guards.

3(b)(iv). What weapons did police find?

Step 1: Read the relevant event or expression in context.

Step 2: Name the two weapons found with the apprehended people, not equipment belonging to police.

Final Answer: Machetes and catapults.

3(b)(v). Give a synonym of haphazardly.

Step 1: Read the relevant event or expression in context.

Step 2: The word describes action without a planned or orderly arrangement.

Final Answer: Randomly; disorderly or unsystematically also fits.

4(i). Change to passive: Honey tastes sweet.

Step 1: First check whether the original verb has an object. Preserve tense when a direct passive is possible.

Step 2: Sweet is a subject complement, not an object that can become a passive subject.

Final Answer: There is no direct passive: tastes is a linking verb with no object. An intended explanatory paraphrase is "Honey is sweet when it is tasted."

4(ii). Change to passive: Ali made us laugh.

Step 1: First check whether the original verb has an object. Preserve tense when a direct passive is possible.

Step 2: Move us to subject we, use were made and add to before laugh in the passive causative.

Final Answer: We were made to laugh by Ali.

4(iii). Change to passive: Who gave you the ice-cream?

Step 1: First check whether the original verb has an object. Preserve tense when a direct passive is possible.

Step 2: Make you the recipient-subject; keep past time with were given and ask about the agent with by whom.

Final Answer: By whom were you given the ice cream?

4(iv). Change to passive: Let him buy a camera.

Step 1: First check whether the original verb has an object. Preserve tense when a direct passive is possible.

Step 2: Keep let and use object + be + past participle bought.

Final Answer: Let a camera be bought by him.

4(v). Change to passive: I do not like people telling me what to do.

Step 1: First check whether the original verb has an object. Preserve tense when a direct passive is possible.

Step 2: Transform the subordinate -ing clause to passive being told; retain the main clause.

Final Answer: I do not like being told what to do.

4(vi). Change to passive: The trumpets are sounding.

Step 1: First check whether the original verb has an object. Preserve tense when a direct passive is possible.

Step 2: There is no object in the original sentence. The paraphrase changes to the transitive use of sound and therefore slightly changes the construction.

Final Answer: No direct passive is possible with intransitive sounding. "The trumpets are being sounded" is the likely intended paraphrase, but it assumes someone is playing them.

5(i). Construct a sentence using as much as: degree or comparison.

Step 1: Choose a complete main clause and a subordinate clause with the required relationship.

Step 2: The clauses compare equal degrees of enjoyment.

Final Answer: I enjoy reading as much as my sister does.

5(ii). Construct a sentence using lest: purpose.

Step 1: Choose a complete main clause and a subordinate clause with the required relationship.

Step 2: Lest introduces the unwanted result to be prevented.

Final Answer: He wrote careful notes lest he should forget the details.

5(iii). Construct a sentence using as: contrast.

Step 1: Choose a complete main clause and a subordinate clause with the required relationship.

Step 2: The concessive construction means although she is young.

Final Answer: Young as she is, she is very wise.

5(iv). Construct a sentence using notwithstanding: concession.

Step 1: Choose a complete main clause and a subordinate clause with the required relationship.

Step 2: Notwithstanding that introduces the obstacle despite which the journey continued.

Final Answer: Notwithstanding that the road was rough, we continued our journey.

5(v). Construct a sentence using as: manner.

Step 1: Choose a complete main clause and a subordinate clause with the required relationship.

Step 2: The as-clause specifies the manner of doing the action.

Final Answer: Do as I have shown you.

5(vi). Construct a sentence using such ... that: effect.

Step 1: Choose a complete main clause and a subordinate clause with the required relationship.

Step 2: Use such + adjective + noun, followed by the resulting effect in a that-clause.

Final Answer: It was such a loud noise that everyone turned round.

6(i). Rewrite Zainabu is reading a book to show an action completed days ago.

Step 1: Identify the required time and whether the action is ongoing, habitual or complete.

Step 2: Simple past fits a finished past time.

Final Answer: Zainabu read a book three days ago.

6(ii). Rewrite Zainabu is reading a book to show an action in progress in the past.

Step 1: Identify the required time and whether the action is ongoing, habitual or complete.

Step 2: Use was + reading for past continuous.

Final Answer: Zainabu was reading a book yesterday afternoon.

6(iii). Rewrite Zainabu is reading a book to show a repeated action.

Step 1: Identify the required time and whether the action is ongoing, habitual or complete.

Step 2: Simple present reads and every week express a habit.

Final Answer: Zainabu reads books every week.

6(iv). Rewrite Zainabu is reading a book to show a future action.

Step 1: Identify the required time and whether the action is ongoing, habitual or complete.

Step 2: Will + base read expresses future time.

Final Answer: Zainabu will read a book tomorrow.

6(v). Rewrite Zainabu is reading a book to show an action completed a few minutes ago.

Step 1: Identify the required time and whether the action is ongoing, habitual or complete.

Step 2: Ago specifies a finished past time and takes simple past. Present perfect has read can express recent completion, but should not be combined with a few minutes ago.

Final Answer: Zainabu read a book a few minutes ago. If present perfect is intended: Zainabu has just read a book.

6(vi). Rewrite Zainabu is reading a book to show an action in progress in the future.

Step 1: Identify the required time and whether the action is ongoing, habitual or complete.

Step 2: Use will be + reading with a future time reference.

Final Answer: Zainabu will be reading a book at this time tomorrow.

7(i). Rewrite with a modal verb: Perhaps my daughter will show up. Begin My daughter.

Step 1: Preserve the degree of certainty, obligation or habitual meaning.

Step 2: May or might preserves uncertainty.

Final Answer: My daughter may show up; might is also suitable.

7(ii). Rewrite with a modal verb: Eating is forbidden in class. Begin You.

Step 1: Preserve the degree of certainty, obligation or habitual meaning.

Step 2: Must not expresses prohibition.

Final Answer: You must not eat in class.

7(iii). Rewrite with a modal verb: I am sure he is poor, based on his dirty clothes. Begin He.

Step 1: Preserve the degree of certainty, obligation or habitual meaning.

Step 2: Must expresses the speaker's strong deduction. The grammar task reports an assumption; dirty clothing does not establish someone's economic status.

Final Answer: He must be a poor person.

7(iv). Rewrite with a modal verb: I do not believe the legend of Hercules is true because of contradictions.

Step 1: Preserve the degree of certainty, obligation or habitual meaning.

Step 2: Cannot expresses the speaker's negative deduction.

Final Answer: The legend of Hercules cannot be true because there are many contradictions.

7(v). Rewrite with a modal verb: Each of us has to study hard for our betterment. Begin We.

Step 1: Preserve the degree of certainty, obligation or habitual meaning.

Step 2: Must expresses the stated obligation.

Final Answer: We must study hard for our betterment.

7(vi). Rewrite with a modal verb: Mr Hussein habitually visited orphanages when young.

Step 1: Preserve the degree of certainty, obligation or habitual meaning.

Step 2: Would expresses repeated past action; used to visit is also a natural alternative.

Final Answer: Mr Hussein would visit orphanage centres when he was young.

8. Use Makame's letter to invite Omary to his sixteenth birthday on 10 December 2023 at 7 p.m. in Pemba North.

Step 1: Identify the host, guest, purpose, event date, time and home venue from the letter.

Step 2: Use 10 December for the celebration; 9 November is the letter's writing date. Do not treat the postal box as a street venue.

Step 3: Arrange the invitation clearly and do not invent an RSVP telephone number.

Final Answer: BIRTHDAY INVITATION
Makame and his family warmly invite
OMARY

Join us for dinner and birthday celebrations.
Your presence will be warmly appreciated.
Makame
Correspondence: P.O. Box 2057, Pemba North

Section Summary: A direct passive needs a transitive verb. Ago normally requires simple past; recent present perfect uses just without a finished-time expression.

Section C — Literature

9. Evaluate the position of women in the supplied Song of Lawino excerpt in six points.

Step 1: Identify six distinct positions: humiliation, intellectual dismissal, beauty pressure, cultural preservation, dignity and a right to speak.

Step 2: Connect each position to an actual image or statement in the supplied excerpt.

Step 3: Write an introduction, developed analytical points and a conclusion; distinguish the husband's prejudice from the poem's overall message.

Final Answer: Model response:

The excerpt presents women as both subject to unfair judgement and capable of defending their dignity. Lawino's husband criticises her, but she answers with a confident account of her identity.

First, women suffer verbal humiliation. Her husband's insults reduce her to a supposedly backward person rather than treating her as an equal partner. Such speech reveals an unequal relationship. Second, women's intelligence is undervalued. His assertion that she lacks ideas dismisses her ability to think, whereas her reasoned response demonstrates that she has ideas worth hearing. Third, women face imported standards of beauty. His rejection of her hairstyle and her comparison with white women show pressure to judge an African woman by another culture's appearance.

Fourth, women preserve cultural identity. Lawino names her parents' communities and identifies herself with Acoli life. Her defence challenges the assumption that inherited culture must be abandoned to gain respect. Fifth, women claim personal dignity. The images of capture by a spear and exchange for millet are rejected; she insists that she is neither a slave nor a commodity. This resistance questions the treatment of women as objects. Sixth, women deserve a voice in defining their own experience. Her final invitation to ask about Acoli beauty shows readiness to teach and explain. The request for a chance exposes how readily that voice has been silenced.

Thus the poem depicts oppression alongside resistance. Lawino is criticised and denied authority, but her defence of intelligence, identity and dignity presents women as people who can speak for themselves.

10. Show how figures of speech deliver messages, using three points from each of two plays.

Step 1: Choose two prescribed plays and three identifiable devices in each.

Step 2: For each device, identify a scene or image and explain the social message it communicates.

Step 3: Do not invent quotations; accurate paraphrases of events can support an essay.

Final Answer: Model response:

Figures of speech make social attitudes vivid rather than merely naming them. Three Suitors: One Husband by Guillaume Oyono Mbia and The Lion and the Jewel by Wole Soyinka use them to expose prejudice, power and contradiction.

In Three Suitors: One Husband, the comparison of Mbaga's speech to a crowd of women is a simile. It uses a gender stereotype to belittle a speaker, allowing readers to recognise the prejudice in everyday language.

Personification occurs when Atangana treats the clock as if it speaks. Giving a timepiece a voice reinforces his impatience about Makrita's return from work and reveals the pressure placed on her labour. Situational irony shapes Juliette's solution to the marriage dispute. Money prized by her elders ultimately enables Oko to meet their demand, frustrating their attempt to control her choice. The device exposes the weakness of greed as a basis for marriage.

In The Lion and the Jewel, the symbolic title sets Baroka's powerful lion against Sidi's valued jewel. These images reveal an unequal pursuit and invite reflection on who controls beauty and power. Baroka's metaphor connecting his voice with sand between grinding stones gives ageing a harsh, physical quality. It makes the passage of time audible and conveys his anxiety about fading vitality. Irony also appears in Lakunle's claim to enlightened modernity while he belittles women's intelligence. The gap between his public ideals and his speech warns that modern language alone does not produce equality.

The plays therefore depend on more than literal description. Simile, personification, symbolism, metaphor and irony make prejudice and power recognisable through memorable comparisons and contradictions.

11. Demonstrate that exploitation should be discouraged, giving three points from each of two novels.

Step 1: Define exploitation and identify who gains power or benefit at another's expense.

Step 2: Develop land dispossession, unequal farm work and low-paid shop work in Weep Not, Child; develop institutional misuse, bride-price demands and abuse of Abooki's trust in Passed Like a Shadow.

Step 3: Explain why each example is harmful, then conclude with the values needed to oppose exploitation.

Final Answer: Model response:

Exploitation occurs when people use power or another person's vulnerability for their own advantage. Weep Not, Child by Ngugi wa Thiong'o and Passed Like a Shadow by B. M. Mapalala show its harm through economic and personal relationships.

In Weep Not, Child, dispossession separates Ngotho's family from land they regard as ancestral. Howlands' control enables him to benefit from land whose earlier occupants have little power over it. This injustice breeds bitterness and conflict. Exploitation also appears in farm labour: Ngotho works on the settler's property while the owner gains from the unequal arrangement. Dependence on employment makes resistance costly, showing why fair terms and dignity at work matter. Later, Njoroge's low-paid employment in an Indian-owned shop offers another example. His need for work allows the employer to obtain labour cheaply, limiting the young man's prospects after his schooling collapses.

In Passed Like a Shadow, Adyeri's diversion of school resources for private interests exploits an institution entrusted to his care. Personal gain comes at the expense of learners and public trust. His demand for a high bride price from Akena treats Vicky's marriage as an opportunity for gain. Her preference becomes secondary to a guardian's financial demands, showing how exploitation can enter family customs. John's attack on Abooki after drugging her drink is a further abuse of power and trust. It violates her consent and demonstrates why a vulnerable person's dignity must be protected. These examples show that exploitation damages livelihoods, institutions and intimate relationships. Fair employment, accountable leadership and respect for consent and personal choice directly challenge the behaviour portrayed in the novels.

Section Summary: Literary analysis connects a precise textual feature or event to its social meaning. Develop all six points when the question asks for three from each of two works.
